

In Today's Gospel, John 1:43-51, Jesus Christ decided to go to Galilee, and there, upon finding Philip, he said to him, "Follow me." When Philip heard this, he went and found Nathanael, and proclaimed that they had found the One who was prophesized—the Anointed One, and to "come and see". Both were in awe that Jesus Christ knew them; but He said to them, much more will be seen.

Dearest ones, have we been called to follow Jesus Christ in our lives? And if so, do we follow Him? In all aspects of our beings, do we follow Him? Do we call others, when we have been touched by God's grace to come and see, so that they too can follow? Or are we passive in our faith—in our relationship with God, and just do what is minimal? Let us reflect on these complex questions during Great Lent in order for us to come closer to Him in the Highest who loves us unconditionally; in the name of the Father, and the Son, and the Holy Spirit, now and always and forever and ever, amen.
